

“Watching”

© 2017 Jerry Vilhotti

“That park with winds that we call Aeolian Arrows in the bay of howling tortures falls on all heads, but this green monster is a travesty!” yelled Zeus, referring to the ballpark that invented the Little League home run years before the high-pressured league was begun for little men.

Indeed, the fig-limb carriers would have the most shots at the shortened fence over the duration of six months and making sure every inch of space became seats for the Yankee dollar made very few odorous balls to be caught — to become go back to your cave outs — where the game of Beaver Hunting would play with even greater intensity among the cave dwellers than the game of Rounders discovered by Athena Brighteyes years ago before the Spanish-American war that gave birth to a child called Philippines to the bully flexing its muscles to get recognized.